

Lukas F. Mann

lufmann@gmail.com ◦ lukasmann.com ◦ 609-216-3643

Positions (including upcoming)

Arizona State University, W. P. Carey School of Business 2025-
Assistant Professor

Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis 2024-2025
Visiting Scholar

Education

PhD Economics, Princeton University 2018-2024
Dissertation: “Essays on the Macroeconomics of Frictional Labor Markets”

University of California at Berkeley 2017-2018
GESEP exchange with the University of Bonn

BSc Economics, University of Bonn 2014-2017
1.0, with distinction

Publications & accepted papers

- “Labor Market Selection and the Dynamics of a Recovery”. 2025.
Accepted, Journal of Political Economy Macroeconomics
- “Learning about Labor Markets”. Joint with Jake Bradley. 2024.
Journal of Monetary Economics
- “A new IV approach for estimating the impact of macroprudential instruments”. Joint with Niklas Gadatsch and Isabel Schnabel. 2018. Economics Letters

Working papers

- “Spatial Sorting and the Rise of Geographic Inequality”. 2023.
(winner of Econ JM Best Paper Award by the EEA and UniCredit Foundation)
- “Job Amenity Shocks and Labor Reallocation”. Joint with Sadhika Bagga, Aysegul Sahin, and Gianluca Violante. 2024.

Work in progress

- “For Whom the Bot Tolls: Specialization and the Earnings Effects of AI”.
Joint with Lukas Freund.
- “Information Frictions and Matching Efficiency”. Joint with Sadhika Bagga.

Presentations and seminars (including upcoming)

- 2025 ASSA meetings (San Francisco), Midwest Macro (Kansas City), Society for Economic Dynamics (SED) Summer Meeting (Copenhagen, DK)
- 2024 EAYE meetings (Paris), North American Summer Meetings of the Econometric Society (Vanderbilt), Society for Economic Dynamics (SED) Annual Meeting (Barcelona, ES), NBER Summer Institute Micro and Macro Perspectives (Boston), Remote Work Conference (Stanford), Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, University of Georgia, Macalester College, Society for Economic Dynamics (SED) Winter Meeting (Buenos Aires, AR)
- 2023 ASSA meetings (New Orleans), 5th QMUL PhD Workshop (QMUL), North American Summer Meetings of the Econometric Society (UCLA), Society for Economic Dynamics (SED) Annual Meeting (Cartagena, CO), Stanford Institute for Theoretical Economics (SITE) (Stanford), Richmond Fed, Workshop "Labor Firms and Macro"
- 2022 Junior Search and Matching Workshop (Essex, RHUL, Bristol), Young Economist Symposium (Yale), 1st PhD Workshop on Macroeconomic Expectations (Barcelona), Economics Graduate Student Conference (WashU St Louis)

Refereeing

American Economic Journal: Macroeconomics, Econometrica

Honors, scholarships, fellowships, and grants

Econ JM Best Paper Award by the EEA and the Unicredit Foundation	2023
Program for Research on Inequality	2023
Princeton University Departmental Fellowship	2018-2024
Deutschlandstipendium (Germany scholarship)	2015-2017

Prior research experience

- 2019 Research Assistant to Prof. Gianluca Violante
- 2018 Trainee, Directorate International, European Central Bank
- 2017 Research Assistant, German Council of Economic Experts (Sachverständigenrat)

Teaching

Princeton	Macroeconomic Theory (graduate), Computational Methods for Economists (graduate), Junior Independent Work, Introductory Microeconomics
Bonn	Introductory Macroeconomics, Real Analysis

Skills

Programming languages: Julia, R, Stata, Python

Languages: German (native), English

References

Professor Gianluca Violante
Department of Economics
Princeton University
609-258-4003
violante@princeton.edu

Professor John Grigsby
Department of Economics
Princeton University
john.grigsby@princeton.edu

Professor Richard Rogerson
Department of Economics
Princeton University
609-258-4839
rdr@princeton.edu

Last updated: April 14, 2025